

Dora Stock, Portrait Painter of the Korner Circle in Dresden (Studies in German Thought and History)

This text examines Dora Stock, member of a group of lesser-known German women artists who brought about the transition from the idealized portrait to the realistic likeness. A prolific portraitist, she consistently laboured to achieve her vision, reaching at the end of her life a degree of realism akin to the most outstanding portrait painters. The author assembles 36 portraits, numerous letters in English translation, and extensive biographical material.
