

After a series of business failures and a disgraced career Steele, a retired British officer, is forced back into the service by a blackmail scheme that has overshadowed his entire life. His choice is simple: impersonate the glamorous playboy Ross Callum – the most flamboyant agent provocateur ever to operate out of the sinister city of Tangier – or spend the rest of his life in a military prison. As Steele works his way into his his new character he learns of the deadly assassin whose only aim is to murder Ross Callum. Steele’s mission is to draw this incensed man into the open. Over the crowded quaysides and through the twisting alleyways of Tangier, Steele begins to realise that no one can be trusted... “[An] intricately plotted novel ... with exacting detail.” — Publishers Weekly

Nicholas Luard was a writer and politician, but is perhaps best known for his activities in the early 1960s: co-founding The Establishment with Peter Cook and being one of the Lords Gnome of Private Eye. He was educated at Winchester College and Magdalene College, Cambridge, where he read English. A very short academic career was replaced by club management on the strength of a legacy. He then went into writing. He is also the author of ‘The Warm and Golden War’ and ‘The Robespierre Serial’, Endeavour Press is the UKs leading independent publisher of digital books.
